

Manorfield Detectives.

Look at the photograph, a parade involving children...and pets.

But look in the background, do you recognise anything there?

It might give you a clue as to where this is.

The arrow shape was drawn on to this image a long time ago. It was sent to a man fighting in World War 1 by his family. His name was Benjamin Briggs and the arrow is pointing to his daughter, Edna. The card tells him the procession took place on October 13th, 1917 and the card was posted to him on October 22nd, 1917 by his parents. Thankfully he returned to his family and obviously kept this special card safe and brought it home with him.
